SAMPLES WERE PLUCKED IN HANCOCK

County Tobacco Fields And Not In Breckenridge, It Was Alleged By Farmers In Meeting Here Monday.

Therefore Not Representative Of Local Crop.

ANOTHER MEETING SATURDAY TO SETTLE CONTROVERSY.

Monday afternoon at the City Hall a hundred and fifty Breckenridge county tobacco growers gathered to attempt to settle a controversy involving themselves and the American Tobacco Company of the city, which raised the prices paid for tobacco now being delivered here. The farmers interested are affiliated with the Green River Tobacco Growers Association and were led by G. T. Mason against the local representative of the American. Recently the local crop was sold at Owenton to the American and it is understood that a verbal agreement was made whereby the farmers were to deliver their tobacco at Cloverport and receive nine, nine and three on the basis of certain crops to be gathered from the various crops in this section, by Frank Dean representing the sellers, and Mr. Haynes, representing the the buyer. The samples were sent into the local receiving house and all tobacco delivered here was to be accepted and paid for as per the samples at hand. A few deliveries were made and the tobacco did not compare favorably with the samples. The American would not pay number one prices for number three tobacco. Delivers stopped and the war was on, called to determine whether or not the samples in hand were truly representative of the crop to be delivered. Chairman Mason of the meeting called for a discussion of the matter when it was stated that the samples were plucked from Hancock county and therefore not representative of the local crop, the samples being of a superior grade of tobacco. Cert Pate, Mason Hawkins and James Keenan were appointed a committee to meet on next Saturday here in Cloverport a representative each of the Green River Tobacco Growers Association and the American Tobacco Company to arrange for the gathering in of new sample taken from the local crops and arranging of a new scale of prices to meet local conditions. It is very important that every farmer interested in this matter be in Cloverport next Saturday. The meeting will be held at the city hall at 1:30 p.m.

BRECKENRIDGE COUNTY MAN WHO ONCE WAS A PUPIL OF JAMES A. GARFIELD.

THE CHAMBERLAIN RESIDENCE AT IRVINGTON.

Not many men in Breckenridge county can claim the honor of coming in close relationship with a President of the United States, and there is only one who has had the unusual experience of being chastised by a Chief Executive. He is Mr. Charles Chamberlain of Irvington. When a boy he attended school at Hiram, Ohio, taught by James A. Garfield, and for a mischievous, boyish act, the future President gave him some "Hickory t—."

Since Mr. Chamberlain has been a locomotive engineer he has several times been in charge of trains pulling the country's great men. His train has carried Garfield, McKinley and Harrison, all of whom personally thanked him for safe journeys. Senator J. B. Foraker of Ohio, and William J. Bryan of Nebraska, have traveled with Mr. Chamberlain. Mr. Chamberlain formerly lived in Ohio, but for several years has been living at Irvington, where he has a beautiful home. Mrs. Chamberlain is a charming woman, and is greatly admired for her beauty.

FROM IDLENESS TO USEFULNESS.

Ohio River Springs Forth Again. Big Tows Soon To Come.

After many months of idleness, the Ohio river has again come to the aid of local rivermen plying up and down the stream and the last ten days has shown marked improvement in steamboat and smaller craft business. A thorough and general resume of trade is expected within a week or so and the millions of bushels of coal at Pittsburgh will be coming South at an early date. The transportation of coal from Pittsburgh to New Orleans by rail is $4.87 against 18 cents by water. Many of the rivers North of Cincinnati tributary to the Ohio are blocked with coal barges awaiting a rise to be floated out. When the big towboat "Sprague" comes South this year it will be the sign of relief having come to the operators and coal miners of Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

HOW I KILLED MY FIRST INDIAN

BY BUFFALO BILL

FROM "TRUE TALES OF THE PLAINS"

Copyright 1908 by William F. Cody

IN 1857 I was barely eleven when I shot my first Indian. He was a chief. I knew that from his headdress. His name I never learned. Here is the story:

My parents and I, with seven children, had moved from Iowa to Kansas three years earlier. My father had taken up a claim in Salt Creek valley and built a comfortable home. But he was not to enjoy the good days that were to follow.

Kansas just then was torn by the slavery feed, and in the bitter strife of the time my father, after making an antislavery speech at a nearby post trader's store, was mobbed and his life threatened.

On that occasion one of my father's friends, Charles Dennis, by name—stabbed my beloved parent in the side. At the time of the attack I stood unarmed over my wounded father's body and tried with childish strength to fight off his assailant; but, though he escaped with the knife, he was so badly wounded that he was captured, subsequently succumbed to his injuries, and in the following spring he died. This calamity deprived my mother and our family of a worthy and esteemed head of the household, his death being an incident in the heroic spirit of sacrifice that eventuated in the tragedies of the civil war. I was then ten years old.

I could ride any horse alive. I had a knack of shooting straight, and I knew something about herding cattle. I thought these qualities might earn me a living. They did.

A firm of overland freighters—Russell, Majors & Waddell—were at Leavenworth. One of them, Mr. Majors, had been a friend of my father. I asked him for a job as "extra" on one of his winter trains. The pay was $40 a month—a fortune it seemed to me then. The work was the sort usually intrusted to a grown man, and it meant not only perpetual hustling, but a life of danger as well, for the plains in those days were anything but free from Indians. This latter thought frightened even my brave mother. Boilie, I was delighted at the idea.

Mr. Majors said he would take me on as extra for one trip. If I did well, we might have regular work, and I could be admitted as an extra.

The "train" was made up of twenty-five loaded wagons, each carrying 7,000 pounds, each drawn by six yoke of oxen and guided by a "bullwhacker" or driver with a long, loud crackin'-whip. There were also a dozen or loose cattle. On this occasion the train was made up of only three wagons, and we were driving a large herd of beef cattle to Fort Kearny for the use of Colonel Albert Sidney Johnson, who was on their way to Salt Lake to fight the Mormons. I was only one of several extra. Though we always set guard no Indians had appeared.

One noon, however, when we stopped for dinner and were loafing about on the prairie waiting for the other wagons to pass, we heard a screeching volley of shots from a coupe. Some bullets and a dozen or more arrows whistled into the air. The shot had hit three of them unarmed and out of the wagons. We heard a yell and ran to see what had happened. Two of them were dead, but the third, who was Dave, had been hit in the head and was lying on the ground.

Phillips, who was in the lead, fired first, but succeeded only in wounding the bear. Dave was now added to the savagery of hunger, and the infurated Indians sprang upon Phillips. Dave fought back, but his foot slipped on a bit of ice, and he went down with a thud, his rifle flying from his hand as he struck.

A bullet from my rifle entered the mouth of the bear.

That brief period of enforced idleness, when it was my sole means of recreation, was a time of great misery.

A fortnight passed. And one day, while I was with my studies, I fell asleep over my books. Some one touched my shoulder, and, looking up, I saw an Indian in war paint and feathers.

"How?" said I, with a show of friendliness though I knew the brave was on the warpath.

Half a score of bucks followed at the heels of the first, squeezing into the little dugout until there was barely room for them to sit down.

"I am the man of Rain-in-the-Face who once recognized me and asked me why I was in that place. This chief was the father of the Rain-in-the-Face who in a later year killed General Custer at the Battle of Little Big Horn."

I displayed my bandages and related the mishap that had made them necessary and refreshed the chief's memory of a certain occasion when a blanket and provisions had done him good. The Rain-in-the-Face replied, with proper gravity, that his chief chumbers were out after scalps and confessed to designs upon mine, but in consideration of said long syme he would spare the paleface boy.

And said the syme, however, spare the blankets and provisions, and the benighted chum crouched the dugout almost bare of supplies, but I was thankful enough to see the back of the last of them.

Two days later a blizzard set in.

I took shelter in a hollow log.

My economy considered, I had food for a week, but as the storm would surely delay Dave I put myself on half rations.

Three weeks were now gone, and I looked for Dave daily, but as

nothing was heard of him for a night again I was given over to keen sorcery. Had Phillips lost his way?

Had he failed to locate the snow covered dugout? Had he perished in the storm? Had he fallen victim to the Indians?—Hobos—transcript.

Two weeks were now gone, and I looked for Dave daily, but as

nothing was heard of him for a night again I was given over to keen sorcery. Had he been lost, but I had no time to think out the situation.

I brought up my rifle and took what aim I could in the dead-of-night.

When my sights were just below the war bonnet's feathers I "Tell you what I think I'd better do," said he. "The nearest settlement is some eight miles away, and I can get there and back in twenty days. Suppose I make the trip, get a team for our wagon and come back for you?"

The idea of being left alone and well nigh helpless struck dismay to the heart, but there was no help for it, and I assented. I was strapped into shipshape, piled wood in our dugout, cooked a quantity of food and put it where I could reach it without rising and fetched several days' supply of water. Mother, ever mindful of my education, had put some school books in the wagon, and I read them beside the fire and made water. When Phillips finally set out, driving the surviving team before him, he left behind a very lonely and homesick boy.

During the first day of my confinement I felt deathly sick, but much less to me. But as I grew accustomed to solitude I derived real pleasure from the companionship of books. Perhaps in all my life I never extracted so much benefit from study as dur-

A yell from the hand he had led, and a score of Indians swarmed up to the bank. But our men drove them back, and they gave up the attack as a bad job. At dawn we limped worn out into Fort Kearny, where we were still set on a wild goose chase for the Indians. They were never caught. The slashed, scalped bodies of our dead were found beside the wrecked, looted wagons.

When I was thirteen my mother was taken by a stroke, and the family became gold hunters; for this was late in 1858, when the gold fever swept America and all roads led to Pike's peak. Our Salt Creek valley home lay on one of the most traveled routes.

Later, having nothing to do, I was compelled to turn my energies to trapping. Winter was setting in when we started.

We bought an ox team and wagon to transport the traps, camp outfit and provisions and took a large supply of ammunition, besides extra rifles. Our destination was the Republican river.

It courses more than 150 miles from its head to the Missouri, and was reputed rich in beaver. I acted as scout on the journey, going ahead to pick out trails, locate camping grounds and look out for breakers. The information concerning the beaver proved correct, and I made a good deal of pleasure out of the trapping.

Winter was setting in when we started.

We chose a hollow in a side hill and enlarged it to the dimensions of a decent sized room.

There was no Indians on our trip.

On the first night we were good and not concerned in that quarter, though we were too good plainmen to relax our vigilance. There were other foes, as we discovered the first night in our new quarters.

We were good and not concerned in that quarter when the oxen were confined, and, hurrying out with our rifles, we found a huge bear intent upon a feast of beef. The oxen were bellowing in terror, one of them dashed crazily about the inclosure and the bear so badly hurt that it could not get up.

He was a huge bear, and I knew he was on the warpath.

Half a score of bucks followed at the heels of the first, squeezing into the little dugout until there was barely room for them to sit down.

"I will tell you the truth. You are Irishmen, therefore brave men. The floor is giving way, and we must leave this room at once. If there is a panic and all fall, then the door we shall be panicked in the door, but if you obey my orders we shall be saved. Let the twelve men nearest the door go quietly out, then the next twelve, and so on till all have gone. I shall be the last to leave."

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1908.

This is fine weather for plowing and the farmers are taking advantage of it. Despite the long drought during the fall months the crops which were sown in the fall are growing rapidly and if favorable weather prevails during the spring months there will be a bumper crop of wheat. From all accounts and the preparations being made there will be a record-breaking acreage of tobacco this year. Plant beds are being prepared and burned for early sowing of seed which means early plants and lots of them.

Farmers are in fine spirits and working with a vim not seen in many years.

An ounce of tobacco seed contains from 300,000 to 400,000 seeds. It is said that not more than 35,000 good plants are available from an ounce with the best preparation of the beds and sowing. Experienced planters usually sow three times the amount of seed that they expect to need.

In selecting a site for a seed bed location, exposure, protection from frosts, insects and parasitic diseases are to be considered. A southern exposure is always best, a southeastern exposure next, then a western and lastly a northern or northeastern.

Where possible it is advisable to locate the seed bed near a pond, a lake, running brook or river, because of the moisture and greater uniformity of temperature in such a location. It is best where possible to do so, to make the bed upon new land. There is less danger from larvae, insects and weed and grass seed.

As damp areas are more subject to parasitic and fungus diseases, many growers prefer to make their beds, for this reason, on high, dry warm soil near the house and keep it damp by frequent sprinkling. An open space in the woods where the midday sun shines has always been a favorite location for a seed bed, because of the protection the grass affords from the cold, winds and the excessive drying out of the plants and soil.

Growers usually make it a rule to plant beds a week or ten days apart, as a protection against unexpected cold and other causes of loss. When a bed is killed out with the cold it is immediately resown. When the plants come up too thick in a bed they should be immediately thinned to allow space for a good root development. Each plant should be allowed at least a square inch of space for the roots to develop.

The best size for a plant bed is 50 feet long and not over three feet wide in order that all parts of it may be reached from either side. The bed should be enclosed with a frame and covered with muslin. In from six weeks to two months after the seed is sown the plants are ready to be transplanted to the field.

The thing for every farmer to do is to work for quality instead of quantity. A small acreage and good quality is much better than a large acreage and poor quality. Make the quality and there will be no trouble about making the price.

Good methods, skill and experience in cultivation, careful working and care in the barn and after curing is what makes your tobacco desirable. The trust buyer, the independent buyer and the small dealer all want good tobacco and will pay the price.

BLOWING IN THE YULE.

Quaint Christmas Customs of an Old Town in Denmark.

"You say, madam," said the bearded bawler to the woman in the witness box, "that the defendant is a sort of relation of yours. Will you please explain what you mean by that—just how you are related to the defendant?"

"The witness stepped upon the court and replied:

"Well, it's just like this. His first wife's cousin and my second husband's first wife's aunt married brothers named Jones, and they were cousins of mine. The defendant, his grandfather on his mother's side and my grandfather on my mother's side were second cousins, and his stepmother married my husband's stepfather after his father and my mother died, and his brother Joe and my husband, brother Harry, married twin sisters. I ain't never dugger out with Luther's sturdy challenge, 'A Mighty Fortress Is Our God,' while down below I was led."

There was something both weird and beautiful about those faraway strains in the quiet, cold, still air of a northern winter, something that was not of earth and that suggested to my child's imagination the angels songs on far Judaea hills. Even now, after all these years, the memory of it does that. It would be hard to find a man whose music was so rare, for the band was made up of small storekeepers and artisans who thus turned an honest penny on festive occasions. Incongruously enough, I think the official town band, made up to play to funerals, was one of them. It was the burglers' guard, the colonel of which—we thought him at least a general because of the huge brass sword he trailed when he marched at the head of his men—was the town tailor.

"Forgetful." An eminent painter was once asked if he thought art students did well to go to Europe to study. He said that students in the ateliers of Paris were artistic in Europe, but anywhere else, but that Paris as a city to study and work in was overrated.

To illustrate his meaning he said that a certain rich man's son after three years in Paris wrote home to his father:

"Dear Father—I have made up my mind to set to work. Please let me know at your earliest convenience whether it was painting, architecture or music I came to Paris to study."

A $4000 Contest--Shorthand Free.

The Chartier students finishing 172 words ahead of all other contestants in the $4000 Shorthand Contest has awakened a great interest. Our graduates in this system now hold excellent positions in the 4th Ave. and Main St. houses, where high-class work is demanded, and none of these graduates were in Shorthand more than 12 weeks, some were in only 10 weeks, some 8.

This is a sample of the systems we teach and WHY we can graduate students in Book-keeping in 16 weeks and in Shorthand in 12 weeks.

POSITIONS GUARANTEED.

Business men are constantly on the lookout for young people who can do a great amount of work and do it easy, and there is such a great demand for our graduates, so many more calls than we can fill that we will guarantee to place you in a good position when graduated. At this writing we have a $65 position an no one to take it. We often have 20 calls a month more than we can supply, often in a week we have a half dozen good positions for graduates that we cannot fill.

A FAIR PROPOSITION.

During the past three years we have demonstrated the real merits of the wonderful Chartier Shorthand and Actual Practice Book-keeping. We know their possibilities, and, while it might seem strange that we CAN and DO graduate students in 28 weeks, for $80, and that it takes from 12 to 15 months with old systems, and costs $150 to $180, yet, with THESE SYSTEMS this is possible. We know this as we have a host of graduates drawing excellent salaries and NOW, we are going to give a Full Week's Instruction FREE, beginning January 4th, admitting all who desire. At the end of the week having thoroughly investigated the work and having paid no money you can then decide whether it is what you want and whether to take it or not.

Does it not look that we have great confidence in the systems to be willing to take you and teach you a week FREE and then let you decide what you want to do? No school teaching any other system will permit you to do this--the reason is, the old systems are so hard to learn that if you were to take a week free, they could not induce you to take the course. While with this system, when you have been a week you will be more anxious to take the course than ever. We know this and willingly give you the week FREE.

Make your arrangements to be here January 4th, and at the end of the first week you will enroll for the course.

Enroll January 4th. Graduate in Book-keeping and Shorthand and a good position will be yours. We guarantee results. Bring your friends with you. Day and Night sessions.

A FATAL CARD.

How It Killed the Religious Department of the London Times.

When the Thunderer decided to devote one or more of its columns daily to an ecclesiastical column all the world sat up and admired. The man chosen to conduct the column was a rather elderly and occasionally a vivacious younger son who for years had contributed church news to the paper, but had never dreamed that he should star in the ecclesiastical column, especially becoming one of the editors of the Thunderer, that world shaking power. The promotion went to his head, made him dizzy. He saw himself a power in the land, one who perhaps could make or unmake ecclesiastical dignitaries.

On the morning of the announcement of the new venture the new incumbent came into town on his usual train from Surbiton, his head swimming with delight. At the foot of Ludgate Hill he met an old friend, whom he forthwith entered the Green Dragon bar.

"Aha, you're in! I've really made it, what do you suppose has happened? Oh, you'll never need dream it! Look! What'd you say to that, old boy?"

"That" was a newly engraved card on which appeared this announcement:

MR. CECIL APPLEYER, BOTSFORD-HERETONING, The Ecclesiastical Editor.

"My word, old chap, it's the most delightful news I've heard in an age!" cried his friend. "Let's have just one more."

Before he reached Tumbl Bar the ecclesiastical editor had met five other friends.

"D'ye know, Ned, with that card I could call on the archbishop's 'Canterbury. Yes. He'd see me immediate-ye. Won't you card this. Indicates pos- ture. 't' stordinary responsibility 'n' dient."

Half-way to the office of the Thunderer Mr. Botsford-Hetherington haled a hansom.

"Have you," he inquired, with much gravity--"have you a fast and well ap- pointed cab? Yes? Very well, then. You may drive me to Lambeth palace."

At the palace a few men took one of the new cards and conducted the owner of it to a pleasant reception room, where he snuggled in a vast chair and instantly went to sleep.

The archbishop of Canterbury happened to be in the room at the same time, and at the sight of the card he felt sure that something of importance was at hand and sent his chaplain to inquire.

That tall, slender, dark, ascetic gentleman strode slowly to the reception room and after a slight but decorous struggle succeeded in waking him.

"His grace," said the chaplain, "begs to know how he can serve the Thunderer."

"Tell his grace," responded Mr. Botsford-Hetherington, "that I'm awfully busy thinking and I'm sorry I shan't be able to see him till tomorrow. Very truly yours."

Forthwith he relapsed into slumber. Two sturdy men deposited him in his fast and well appointed cab and ordered the driver to deliver him at the office of the Thunderer. There the ecclesiastical editor and the ecclesiastical department simultaneously vanished--Harper's Weekly.

Truth Versus Politeness.

Ethel was going to take supper with a little friend.

"Now, dear," said her mother, "when you're leaving you'll tell Marian's mamma to give her a kiss and tell her you had a very pleasant time."

When the little girl returned her mother asked if she had done as she told her.

"Not exactly, mamma," was the reply. "Marian took the biggest piece of the apple pie and the biggest piece of the new dress, so I couldn't say what you told me, but I told her mother good night and said I guessed Marian had had a very pleasant time."--Judge.

Towers.

The patient architect had just succeeded in getting Mr. Drippinggold to decide between the charms of romance, classic and Queen Anne for the plan of her magnificent new country house.

"The only details I ain't givin' to leave to your discretion," said the wealthy lady, "is the matter of towers. There's plenty of towers that folks can see for a long way off when they're ridin' by."

"But what kind of towers do you want?" inquired the unfortunate architect.

"Norman, Gothic,"

Mrs. Drippinggold closed the English novel of high life on which her son had been feeding.

"Why, ancestral towers, of course."

Medicine That Is Medicine.

"I have suffered a good deal with my asthma and stomach complaints, but I have now found a remedy that keeps me in good health, and that remedy is Electric Bitters."

A medicine that is a medicine for stomach and liver troubles, and for run down conditions," says W. C. Kiesler, of Halliday, Ark. THE BEST IN LIFE.

Cultivate Glasses--The Broad Impression With Constant Practice.

If you want to get the worth of the bargain in life cultivate gladness. The one who mores doesn't enjoy herself, and surely no one enjoys her.

Any one can be glad when things go her way. To be glad when the maid breaks a plate, when the dinner set and the fork on which you've broken yourself turns out a right shows a disposition that can be counted on to life's wheels.

There's a lot of gladness going, but many are blind to it. What we want is to take life like a healthy child and find enjoyment in simple things. We can cultivate our critical side until it takes the zest from everything.

What if we haven't an overflowing bank? We need hang down the corners of our mouth, and then we have health and the outdoors and love to make for gladness? Does it come easier to look on the black side? Has the pose of misfortune become your natural state? Forget it and take to grinning.

It's better than chronic depression. Keep pumping out that oil of gladness, and bring it by the damps will be lifted.

Gladness isn't an effort to be glad; it is just being glad. You cannot worry yourself into it; neither does it come by suggestion; it does come from taking life easy and enjoying things, whether they were meant to be enjoyed or not.

You sad one, try for a day to hunt causes for gladness. Instead of summing up your woes and mourning over the total, get in a receptive mood for joys. You'll be surprised at the end of the day to find how many have been the occasions for smiling.

Don't Be Hopeless about yourself when you're crippled with rheumatism or stiff joints--of course you've tried lots of things and they failed. Try Ballar's Snow Liniment--it will drive away all aches, pains and stiffness and leave you as well as you ever were. Sold by A. R. Fisher.

A CAT AND A CANARY.

They Went Away Separately, but Came Back Together.

A lady friend of mine, says an English friend, left her two pets together, but returned to find a cat. The two were the best of good friends, and when the bird's prison door was opened it would come out and perch on the cat's back while it trilled forth a song of gladness.

One day my friend left her two pets together, but returned to find a cat was nowhere to be found. Pussy was curled up on a cushion, sleeping contentedly and my friend jumped to the conclusion that the cat was answerable for the bird's disappearance, consequently she caught up the cat and, holding the supposed delinquent before her, said, "I'll give you a quarter of a million dollars if you'll bring back my bird." Poor pussy purred piteously, but her relentless mistress put her outside and shut the door against her.

Next morning, feeling rather ashamed of her outburst, she made inquiries about the missing bird.

Some days later she heard a faint scratching at her window, and on opening the casement a cat crept in and laid a bedraggled canary at her feet. At first she did not recognize her bird in the two disreputable looking objects before her. When she did recognize them her delight was great.

Presumably the canary had gone out by the open window, and, finding it sweet, it had flown to a neighboring window. How the cat found the bird and brought it back uninjured is a mystery.

We have passed the fifth milestone in our existence. During that time we have grown from a small beginning to a large and prosperous business. We have endeavored to keep abreast of the times, and in doing so, have endeavored to give our depositors every safe-guard known to their protection and security. Our funds are guarded by a modern burglar and fire-proof safe, and insurance is carried to cover losses by either burglary or robbery. We pay 4 per cent. interest on time deposits, which is more than any other bank in Breckinridge county pays.

We believe in paying our patrons all we can for the use of their money. The late disastrous bank failures have demonstrated that it is not the oldest and largest bank that is the safest. We take this opportunity to thank our customers whose patronage has helped to make this the largest and best statement in our five years of business.

Time to Stop.
Mrs. Benham—Henry, I am more than glad that you have come to see me, but how did you come to leave off? Benham—You remember the last time your mother was here? Mrs. Benham—Yes. Benham—Well, one night while she was here I came home in pretty bad shape and saw three of her. That settled it.

His Fears Realized.
"My heart is in my mouth. I am afraid to hear you answer."
"You may well be, Mr. Dollboy," retorted Ethel. "I never could marry a man whose heart was not in the right place!"

MIX THIS.

Prepare at Home by Shaking Ingredients Well in a Bottle.

What will appear very interesting to many people here is the article taken from a New York daily paper, giving a simple prescription, which is said to be a positive remedy for backache or kidney or bladder derangement, if taken before the stage of Bright's disease.

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Saraparilla, three ounces. Shake well in a bottle, and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal until the remedy is put up if asked to do so.

He further stated that while this prescription is often prescribed in rheumatic afflictions with splendid results, he could see no reason why it would not be a splendid remedy for kidney and urinary troubles and backache, as it has a peculiar action upon the kidney structure, cleansing these most important organs and helping them to sift and filter from the blood the foul acids and waste matter which cause sickness and suffering. Those of our readers who suffer can make no mistake in giving it a trial.

MR. HILLS HURT.

Mr. Harry Hills of Richmond, who came here last week to spend Christmas with his family at the home of Mrs. Mary Elze, suffered a dreadful accident Christmas. A window fell on his hands and hurt them so bad they had to be bandaged. While shooting some fire-works the next night, the cloths of his fingers became ignited and burned both hands severely.
